A GOOD IDEA.

Heretofore the street operations in stocks have been without system, everyone acting upon his own responsibility regardless of anything or anybody. This is the way dealers who were not members of either Board and who did not want to pay the brokers their percentage operated. On Monday last what is known as the Pacific Exchange was organized with Lucky Baldwin as President. The purposes of this Association are to consolidate street dealing into some sort of system. It is proposed to buy land, receive donations and erect a building wherein, under the rules of the Society, the public can buy and sell stocks and securities. In other words, it aims to give the public who, after all are the main stay of the stock market, a chance to do business among themselves in a building and with some sort of regularity. This will do away to some extent with the crowds about the exchanges, and enable much business to be transacted without the intervention of brokers. The corporation has no capital stock and its object is not pecuniary profit, but public accommodation.
